wormhole, with more to come. A long-standing ecosystem partner has also begun work on a Kaia block explorer, which will be ready on day one as well.

The merging of our community and social platforms have also begun, starting with Discord. Preparations have also been made for the Kaia blog and social media accounts, which will be launched closer to the date when the mainnet will go live.

As for core development, we have completed work on the Kairos testnet, which has just gone live. Development work for the Kaia mainnet is well underway, with the first of multiple security audits having been completed. However, the launch of the Kaia mainnet will need to be pushed back slightly to Q3 2024 as the registration process for the Kaia DLT Foundation is taking longer than initially expected.

The reason the foundation needs to be established before the mainnet can be launched is because we firmly believe that decentralization is

Kaia Portal — a gateway of rewards for Kaia users

Kaia Portal is an official web service provided by Kaia DLT Foundation. It will serve as a gateway to the Kaia ecosystem, giving users quick and easy access to frequently-used functions while also rewarding on-chain activities through a point system. Kaia Portal will provide three primary features:

- FNSA to KAIA swap and airdrop services
- DeFi-centric missions for users to earn points that can be redeemed for rewards
- On-ramp, swap, bridge and farming services

Note: The screen captures below are taken from a development build of Kaia Portal, the actual release may have some UI/UX changes.*

Delegation, which will allow users to delegate their KAIA to their preferred validator. Accessible through Kaia Square, Public Delegation will enable KAIA holders to participate in Kaia governance through the delegation of their voting power, while also earning their share of the block rewards earned by the validator.

Previously, Klaytn's Public Staking service required each GC member to independently develop public staking functionality, which was not only time and resource intensive but also led to fragmentation in implementation. With Public Delegation, Kaia validators will be able to tap on a library of open source smart contracts to implement the delegation feature, ensuring greater consistency and standardization while also simplifying the implementation of the feature. This is expected to result in a wider selection of validators for users to delegate to, while also encouraging healthy competition between validators which will undoubtedly be beneficial for end users.
